MANY TRAIN WRECK VICTIMS

Twenty Negroes Killed in a Collision Near Kentwood, La.

Ten other negroes and three white men were injured, some of them fatally. The collision was between the McComb City accommodation train and the Northern express, bound to Chicago.

The McComb City train left here at 3:50 p. m. It should have sidetracked to let the express, which left at 5:20 p. m., go by, but got behind before it reached Kentwood. Near that station the express ran the accommodation down. The rear coach of the accommodation, filled with negroes, many of them section hands who had been picked up on the way, was completely wrecked. The engine of the express did not leave the track, and after an hour's delay the through train proceeded on its way.

"It is an encouraging sign of progression along the right lines that the interests of municipalities is being so largely directed to the protection of young people, or to the safer and more definite correction of delinquents of this class. Children's courts, children's places of detention and children's prisons called by tender names, is becoming general throughout the states. But it bespeaks a large degree of all the better instincts of our humanity, that ladies and gentlemen of the community will give their time and thought, their labor and their means to societies like yours, which secure to our young people the best possible means to happiness of life, and secure to our commonwealth the best possible assurance of a noble and worthy citizenship."

CY HALL IN THE RIVER.

But He Got Out Again After Measuring His Six Feet Two.

Cyrus Hall, a carpenter employed on the E. A. Drown block, took an unexpected plunge from a lofty height into the cold waters of the river in the rear of the block, this forenoon. He was working on the top of a 39 foot ladder when the ladder slipped and precipitated the carpenter into the river, the water of which is about four feet deep at this point.

Hall landed lengthwise, which is pretty long, and there was a scattering of the spony tribe in that section of the river. The spectators maintain that Hall made the fastest time of his life getting out. Beyond a complete soaking he was none the worse for his plunge.

H. A. Rugg, who saw the performance from a nearby staging, was so tickled that he lost his balance and nearly duplicated the act. Said the latter, after recovering his equilibrium, "Cyrus, are you hurt?" "No," quoth Cyrus, "but this ain't holy water."
